

The airwaves belong to the public. Using them in a partisan attack of John Kerry is despicable and clearly not serving the public interest of approximately 50% percent of the United States' population. Direct electioneering by a corporate media giant is against federal election law and should not be tolerated. Good journalism and democracy are both at risk when a media giant such as Sinclair is capable of smear tactics such as this. Sinclair Broadcasting's decision to force their stations to air an anti-Kerry documentary days before the election is a clear example of the dangers of media consolidation.
